Projects & Products

The problem took place in a school in a community in Ms.Kara's classroom. This problem is plants dying. These plants need a better environment. We are doing this final project because of the boy that harnessed the wind by William K^abwama. The book is about William building a windmill.

The solution to this problem is building a loft. My first thought was to make a pulley system so all of the plants get enough energy. But we went to a room with a loft in it. Ms.Kara said to us that we should do a loft and everyone agreed to go with it.

The steps to this solution are: Number one massive room. Number two discusses the rain barrel. Number three supplies. Number four get the supplies inside. Number five build. Number six more building's . Number seven problem solving.

Plants help us and feed us. Plants grow watermelon and cocoa for chocolate. They also help bees and the bees can pollinate the plants. Some you can even eat. Some are beautiful and some hurt you but we need plants to survive. The problem was plants dying and this was the solution to save plants.

Strong communication systems but hard to get on and more consistent use needed.

I live for the shirting ceremony!

We want Inspire to add a high school!

We love that our kids get to be with the same group of friends for longer - all the way through 8th grade!

Centering Parent Voice and Choice

We don't want to be known as a school for troubled kids - we want to be known as a school of inquiry - the fieldwork, the projects!

We love the small size and facility!

Where We're Going

100%

- Increase enrollment targets and sustain waiting list of interested families with focus on filling middle school grades while maintaining early childhood enrollment
- Explore talk of high school programming once these enrollment goals become a reality
