

Listen to them.

Can you hear it

A broken instrument in a symphony of perfection

Spoken to be insolent by the conductor's discretion

There is no sympathy for difference empathy, just a bisection

Obsession fueled by pure aggression to only have one opinion

We are all minions of our own ignorance, and we fall to oblivion

Hear the voices or let them destroy us

The last vote in the election, can you hear that voice

The voice for pro-choice and the voice for no-choice

If you can only hear one, rejoice you can't stand to listen to the other's noise

Slam one knee on his neck, the other on his back, hear his voice

Many fear it, afraid to come near it, but are quick to shear it

Fight for what is right even in the darkest of nights

A nation that still battles black discrimination what a shame it is

Hear the powerful sensation of the voices fighting against oppression

Defend her or amend her because it's not you who chooses their gender

He loves He, and She Loves She just let it be set them free

What you see is love at first sight or only one love that is right

If you can hear these voices, then listen to mine

It's time for a resolution, or am I just saying this because I got out of the mental institution

Life can be overwhelming I'm at the helm of the ship it is not turning

Pages of my story are burning my heart keeps yearning

I'm not a victim or sick but am I a brainiac or considered a maniac

Sometimes I can't control my disorder

On the border of destruction, my mind is a thought hoarder

Don't be scared of what I say because most times what I say scares me anyway

Everyone's life experiences are different

You might not relate to my voice but appreciate the significance because everyone's voice is magnificent

Mental health can be a challenge to understand but I'll never be afraid to become the man

I get hit by life and it makes me rumble, stumble, bumble, mumble, tumble, scuffle, and shuffle

When I'm in double trouble I try to stay humble but it's simple sometimes I don't have my mental

I cannot completely eliminate my brain weight but these writings help me lower the weight

Hear their voice, hear our voice, hear my voice
